Windows 10. Compatible with any media player or sound player. Friday, July 30, 2014 Crazy Bare Feet

This week, a good friend of mine passed away.

"My childhood friend," she would have said. It's hard to describe the impact of that loss in mere words, but I want you to know that, at the time, I was ready to let her go. She wasn't sick or dying, she was going through a rough time. I understood that, and I was there to listen to her. What I didn't expect was for her to show up on my doorstep on the weekend before she died. She was crazy barefooted. And I can't describe how this affected me. I am a nurse. She knows what's wrong when I examine her feet. I don't think I can heal her foot right now. But the situation she is in, I am not sure she can heal at all. I just stood there, staring at her feet. And when she spoke, she said, "I don't know what I'm doing. I don't know what to do." And I could only nod and say, "It's OK. You know what to do." And that's when I knew that I would never be able to heal her feet. That this was the problem. I don't know what to do. But I know what I've learned, and what I want to share. And I know, in this moment, she feels the same way I feel. That we are in the same place, and we are both OK. But I still want her to feel the way I do. So if you could, too, tell her: We are doing OK.
