See - I thought you had to spend an obscene amount of money to purchase an app. I am not aware of that. I will check on this. I don't see how this is not obvious. I was not aware that Windows did not allow you to change the location of the default app for opening emails or attachments. I was under the impression that this was normal

Windows behavior, like in Mac OS X. I do understand the issue with the IME. It's not MS's fault. But it would have been better for a user to be given that choice. I don't see how this is not obvious. Search results from Bing Desktop are displayed in your browser. Seems to be working fine and it does do the job. I find the lack of the weather component in the software a little annoying but it is still a great and useful program to be able to search the web. I can definitely recommend it to anyone who is looking for a good alternative to the default built-in search tool in windows. That all said it does its job perfectly and I was really glad I stumbled on it. I do not have a problem with the software and I recommend anyone to try it out as it is a useful tool. Great program. I had to disable "Microsoft Default Search" and replaced it with Bing Desktop. Bing Desktop is very good and it does everything you need it to. I have found Bing Desktop to be a great replacement for "Microsoft Default Search". The web browser opens and closes, any open page in your browser, and the search, just as you would expect. However, a complaint I have is that the search box, while searching with Bing Desktop, sometimes, if typed very quickly, causes the application to crash. It usually just shuts down the entire system, but sometimes the application may start working again. This is a very annoying thing because the application is very useful, but it's a minor inconvenience that I do not have on other programs. I can recommend Bing Desktop to anyone looking for a useful tool to use to search the web. The good I find the search box and options and results are very accurate and helpful. The
