wreck,” Silvester said. “You are full of doubt. You are not sure how to react. You have to figure out the right things. It is a bit scary and a bit overwhelming.” But while the young women have come a long way, having been through this process before, the guys are still relatively new to the competition. The Maximus Racing

Cup will be Silvester's first season racing with a team and he credits the support he received from his dad, Rob, as a major help. "I think I would be lost without my dad," Silvester said. "He helped me so much. We drove home to Dorset, then I drove the 200 miles back to London. There were no hotels in London, so I went to my friend's place. “He is always just there for me. We sit down and talk about everything. We are open to each other, so we can support each other and he can explain things to me.” Silvester has since made great progress on the road and his time on the track has been rewarded with several first-place finishes at British racing events.

With his cycling career seemingly going from strength to strength, Silvester admitted that it is his motorsport ambitions that motivate him to train so hard. “For me, the motorsport is the icing on the cake,” said Silvester, who plans to represent the United Kingdom in the EKOS NACAM Rallycross Series at Santiago, Chile, in October. “I love the World Rallycross Championship and the EKOS NACAM Rallycross series, and I want to race in those series for a couple of years.”
