I need to use this property in my view but before I do, I need to calculate a new property in the ViewModel. I update the ViewModel property and use that to set a property of the UIView (i.e.: myView.title = viewModel.prop1) What happens is that my View's viewDidLoad is called again, so all properties are reset to their original values. I need the myView.title to be set only after the ViewModel has been updated (i.e.: after the calculations in viewModel.updateProperty()). Is there any easy way of achieving this? A: The View is loaded every time the view controller is created, so the following code in viewDidLoad will always be executed. If you need to change the title of the UIView only after changing the property of your ViewModel then you need to call [myView setTitle:myViewModel.prop1] in viewDidLoadUpdate.
