Getting Started With Photoshop Elements If you're getting started with Photoshop Elements, you should start by opening a new file. On your computer, open the folder you'd like to work in, and then open the file called "new project." If you're unsure where your file is, you can easily find it in the file manager. You can open your file by clicking on the New button. You will now have access to all of the features that Photoshop Elements has to offer. There are 3 options you can choose from when you open your file in Photoshop Elements: Normal mode — makes a new file Custom mode — allows you to make a copy of your existing file in a new file Guided mode — allows you to follow specific steps in creating your photo, such as choosing a resolution, choosing a file type, and setting your white balance Let's say that your photo has too much red in it — you know what, that's kind of perfect for this tutorial. Open your photo in Photoshop Elements. Go to Edit —> Filter —> Adjust Color —> Desaturate. Hit OK. Open up the Options bar and select "Colorize," and then hit OK. The color of your reds will turn gray as you begin to shift the blues in your photo. A few different things are happening here. You have just lightened the reds in your photo and are shifting the blue tones to darken up the blues. As you continue to work on this photo, other filters will let you shift your colors to give you different effects. The toolbox will help you learn the various features that Photoshop Elements has to offer. You can go here to see a comparison of different effects. Let's say you want to turn this picture of the sunset into a lightning bolt! To do that, all you need to do is open the Image —> Adjust —> Levels. Click OK on the dialog that pops up. Your image should look like this. Let's say you want to turn the color of the leaves yellow! To do that, open the Image —> Adjust —> Curves. Click OK. The image will now look like this. Q: Making the slideUp animation only occur in one nav I'm fairly new to javascript, I have a site that I want to make into a toggle. It works fine, except for one thing. What I'm trying to do is stop the slideUp animation if you click on the arrow next to the other nav instead of the ones under the image. HTML: News article JS: var data = { newsTitle: "News", newsIcon: "fa fa-angle-down", newsSubTitle: "Learn more about our news", newsDescription: "Learn more about our news", newsBody: "", newsCategory: "News" } $('nav a').click(function(event){ var target = $(this).attr("href"); $('nav ul').collapse('hide'); $('ul.collapse').collapse('hide'); if(!$('.collapse[id='+target+]').length){ $('nav ul[data-toggle="collapse"]').collapse('show'); } if (target == "#!news") { $('nav li a').css("background-color","#3bf2c4"); $('nav').removeClass("nav-active"); $('nav a').css("background-color","white"); $('.fa-angle-down').css("display","none"); } else {

Carlos Castaneda's Teachings Menu Carlos Castaneda (1925 - 1998) Carlos Castaneda was born in Lagos, Venezuela. He was raised in his grandparents' home where his grandmother introduced him to the teachings of Don Juan, a Yaqui Indian, a shaman. It was through his grandmother's teachings that Castaneda learned the art of shamanism. Even though Castaneda attended college, he continued his studies of occultism. He became involved in the theosophy movement. Through theosophy, he traveled the world, meeting some of the world's masters and holding initiation ceremonies. He received his training in shamanism and in healing. Castaneda finally concluded that he had to leave theosophy because it was promoting warfare in the world. He was also concerned by the theosophists' connection with Hitler's Nazism, which he condemned. He decided to further his education in shamanism. In 1950, he began to travel. During a trip through Mexico, the leader of a Yaqui tribe recommended that he go to Mexico to study shamanism. (Castaneda claims this to be Don Juan, the Indian shaman; however, Don Juan is from Peru and was never in Mexico.) In 1953, Castaneda met the Yaqui and was taken to the home of the master (the person who teaches and initiates other shamans) of the Yaqui people. It was during this meeting that Castaneda began to study how the Yaquis make contact with the spirits of the world. He was taught that the spirits of the Yaquis were called mayflies and that they were there to help the people of the world. When Castaneda returned to the United States in 1953, he moved to New York and began his training. However, after three months, Castaneda was told that he had disappointed his teacher. He thought it was because he had forgotten part of the training. He left New York to return home. During his time in Mexico, he had been initiated as a sorcerer and had been given a variety of supernatural powers. He came home and was told that he had also failed to do his training. He decided to go back to New York to finish his training. He did so, and was initiated as a sorcerer. Upon returning to New York, Castaneda began working with
