To ensure a durable and clean floor, you will need to use a wide brush or broom. If you want to avoid this, you can use an elegant paint-roller. We recommend you to use a squeegee in order to push the paint down and off the surface. Apply the cleaning product and allow it to dry for about one minute. Make sure to focus on the visible parts. Repeat the process until all required parts are done. Apply sandpaper to the floor and use a brush or broom to spread the product around. Step 3 Apply the sealer that you want to use. Make sure to use a non-toxic cleaner as far as possible. Wipe off the brush with a clean and damp towel and repeat the process. After some time the floor is completely sealed. Take the time to walk on the floor and listen to what it says. With this solution you won't need any wax to achieve a stunning appearance. You can use it to restore a worn out floor or just paint it over. Our professional floor cleaning service is always available to answer your questions. I'm trying to refresh a ListBox from code behind in an attempt to get the result of the hardcoded value into my ListBox. The problem is, if I put a binding expression there like {Binding Path=MyValue} it is not refreshed at all. So I can bind to a class which has a property value, or an object with a string value, it is just not reflected in the ListBox's content. If I put a value in code-behind, it will be displayed, but it is easy to remove by using Drag() or Delete() method. The class I'm binding to is a class which has a string property for a returned result. I am currently dealing with this issue in Xamarin. EDIT: I removed the hardcoded result, to show that it was not the problem, since it is the only binding expression. The same binding expression works in the Xamarin.iOS app. A: You can use BindingContext.ObjectPath in Xamarin.iOS, as long as you use it in UIBindings in the form of {Binding Context.MyValue}.
